GENERAL SAKAMOTO and the Goats

By Chou Yu

A Guerrilla Soldier of the North China Armies

As told to the National War Fund

THE BATTLE [illegible] Sung-[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ammunition, picked off four more with a rifle.

Suddenly a group of Japanese pushed forward with a light machine gun. We waited, our hand grenades ready. Just before they reached our position, three of their own shells fell short, right in the midst of these unfortunate subjects of the Mikado. Thirty-eight were killed. The few who remained ran back beyond the reach of their [illegible]

By [illegible] Sokosan's patrol and smashed [illegible] formerly defended [illegible] of the [illegible] haunted [illegible] ammunition [illegible] to make a break for it, and they left our northern section completely surrounded. Our defenses were leveled, and our position was critical. But we had held off the enemy for [illegible] eight hours ordered, and we could retreat to our last line of fight[illegible] village itself.

We took account of our new line. Most of the men in one entire [illegible] squad [illegible] other [illegible] wounded. Their ammunition [illegible] sharing, armed only with [illegible] ades, held a corner of a house [illegible] two hours. Fighting [illegible] the enemy [illegible]

The [illegible] fierce [illegible] seemed [illegible] time [illegible] rule [illegible] come. From 3 o'clock in the afternoon [illegible] between [illegible] how many of us would be there to escape when it finally passed over the horizon.

It was 9 o'clock before it grew dark and the ground was covered with corpses. Japanese [illegible] numbered half [illegible] men. They ceased their attack with the darkness and lighted a fire in a ditch to pre[illegible] attacking them. But they could not see us beyond the fire and under cover of darkness we silently approached, their encircling forces, stepping carefully over the corpses and men sleeping beside them.

As we reached the ditch, a Japanese sentry fired a warning shot. We answered with hand grenades and the Japanese awoke in a wild scramble. It was bayonets and clubbed rifles for awhile, with the sleepy eyed Japs so confused that many of them fought each other during the [illegible]

Together they crept to the [illegible] yelling

"Comrades in the village! Hold fast! We of the [illegible]th and 18th Regiments are coming to help you!"

Once more the enemy guns opened fire. The racket did not stop for a long time. Grunting from ear to ear, Luso and Pyon sneaked back through the trenches. They caught up with the company before dawn by running [illegible] ten miles) on the double.

We heard later from the blind villager who had remained during the fighting that the enemy didn't realize what had happened for a long time. They evidently thought that we had a large force and that only one unit had broken out. So they held to their positions around the village, firing enthusiastically at the imaginary Chinese garrison. Bullets and shells whistled through the empty streets all night.

[illegible] dawn, the Japanese [illegible] moving [illegible] the [illegible] house [illegible] left. [illegible] attacking Japs frightened the animals and they stampeded about the shed, their chains clanking. The enemy thought they had uncovered a Chinese [illegible]bush. They doubled their [illegible] From outside the village, [illegible] artillery pumped in shells. [illegible] hundred enemy reinforcements arrived from Paoting and joined in the battle. By the time they discovered that the defending forces were only eight black [illegible]ists, we had disappeared in the vast sea of [illegible] Hopei [illegible] to harass the [illegible] at another place [illegible] another day. [illegible]00 of their men were casualties, including 500 dead. We had left 38 [illegible] were cut[illegible].
